

Name of Club: _____ For 4-H year ending: _____

Club evaluation is the process by which members and leaders judge whether or not their club is doing a good job. A 4-H club that is providing meaningful learning experiences for its members is performing well. The evaluation process should help the club measure progress in reaching club goals. The degree to which club goals are met may directly affect the degree of club membership satisfaction.

Use this form to evaluate your club's progress in membership, leadership and program. Apply to your County UW-Extension Office for a club achievement certificate with appropriate seals for each of the three areas.

1. Membership

Enrollment trends in a 4-H club are one measure of member satisfaction. An active club with a strong program will keep existing members and attract new ones. If the enrollment is down, it may indicate the need for improving the club program. Because members in similar stages of development will have similar goals and aspirations, members should be grouped by age and sex.

2. Leadership

Four-H club leadership is a critical element in assisting members to set and attain realistic goals based on their abilities. Leaders assist young people by providing learning experiences through training meetings, activities and individual attention. Members who fail to meet their goals will experience frustration, failure and dissatisfaction.

Trends in the Number of Leaders by Years of Youth Leadership

Number of members enrolled in individual projects who were provided youth or adult leader help.
Number of project and/or activity leaders tending one or more leader training meetings.
Number of project and/or activity leaders who held three or more group meetings with members.

3. Program

The club program should provide a series of experiences that meets the needs and interests of people in the club. Goals should be realistic and doable. Goals should provide opportunity for group participation and cooperation as well as for individual achievement by each member. A good plan is like a roadmap; it directs our actions toward our goal or destination.

- Did the club have its meeting, activities and events planned well in advance? Yes No
- Were adult leaders, youth leaders, parents, officers and younger members all involved? Yes No
- Did the 4-H members review and approve the plan before it was adopted? Yes No
- Was a copy of the club plan provided to each member and his/her family? Yes No

What club goals were not accomplished? Why?

Club Meetings

The club meeting allows members to learn to effectively participate in group action. Further, it provides opportunities for members to democratically plan and implement the club plan. Every member should feel part of the organization. When members feel that they belong, one of their basic needs is at least partially satisfied.

Number of regular club meetings held during the year: _____

Member attendance at meetings is an indicator of satisfaction.

The average attendance was:

- 90% to 100%
- 70% to 90%
- 50% to 70%
- Under 50%

A few well planned and conducted meetings are far superior to many meetings that are loosely planned and conducted. Deducting 5 points for each "no" answer, how does your club score?

- 80% to 100%
- 60% to 80%
- 40% to 60%
- Under 40%

Projects and Activities

Members gain success and satisfaction by meeting individual and group interests and goals through projects and activities. As goals are met, new and higher goals should be set. Thus, projects and activities within the interests and abilities of the members should be offered. As members succeed and grow, the scope and depth of their 4-H experiences should likewise grow. This means members should obtain new experiences in some old projects as well as in some new projects.

Generally, club members select two or three activities to include in the club plan and program. By selecting some different activities each year, the members will have a series of new experiences in 4-H.

Give the number of members with leader assistance that developed a list of individual goals at the beginning of the year. This is the number of members using the 4-H Member Project Plan and Evaluation Form.
